

NEW ROAD CHIEF VISITS TOWN AND PROMISES RELIEF

Comes Here at His Request to See for Himself That Connellsville's Claim for Improved Highway North is Just Good News for Autoists.

Practically the first official visit of State Highway Commissioner Frank B. Black was to Connellsville, where he is the guest of H. W. Kephart, chief clerk of the State Senate and Republican nominee for State Treasurer. Black went over the state chair of state road improvement between Connellsville and Pennsylvania, which has been agreed upon by the Connellsville Automobile Club and other organizations for the past several years. Mr. Black pledged

Ohio they became acquainted. The acquaintance ripened into a friendship which has since been uninterrupted. When the appointment of Mr. Blair as state highway commissioner was announced Mr. Kephart immediately got in touch with him and urged an early visit to Connelville. The new

West Virginia travelers and that it is the only road connecting the National Pike and the Lincoln Highway east of Pittsburgh until Canfield is reached it is the shortest route for making these two main transcontinental roads.

With the county constructing an improved road between Pennsylvania and Iron Bridge when the improved roads of Westmoreland county reach Mr. Black was shown that it is the duty of the state to do as much for the road as the county, doing and

That the contention is reasonable was indicated by the attitude taken by Mr. Black after returning from his inspection. He found the state road as rough and dirty as had been repre-

SCOTSDALE PLANS VOLUNTEER TROOP; TO MEET TONIGHT

Movement in the Interest of Preparedness is Launched.

WHOLE NEIGHBORHOOD INVITED

Fifty Men Have Already Signified Intention of Joining Organization, Which Would be Available in the Event of a Call for Volunteers.

Special to The Courier.
SCOTSDALE, July 5.—Scottdale is to have a volunteer company which will be well drilled in case there is a call for volunteers. Other surrounding towns have signified their readiness to answer a call if volunteers are needed by organizing a military company. This is what is in view in Scottdale, Emerson and vicinity. Those interested in the movement will meet at the home of Mrs. J. H. Laker, at the corner of the intersection of the main road and the road leading to the Scottdale school. Fifty men have already signified their intention of becoming members of the organization.

G. A. R. CELEBRATION.
The Colonel Ellsworth Post, G. A. R., celebrated the Fourth yesterday and the birthday of one of their members, J. Harvey Laker, at the home of J. W. Fox at Scottdale. The Kiwanis club, the Laker string band both furnished music during the afternoon. The post had with them their wives and a few friends. Several good addresses were made and an excellent supper was served by the Alverton ladies. A most enjoyable time was spent by the boys.

ORE MINES PRIZE.
The picnic at the Ore Mines yesterday drew one of the largest crowds that ever was at the Ore Mines. Shelves and lanterns ran an auto service from Scottdale and Joe Weger ran an auto service from West Overton. The music by the Woodville Harmony Band and the music by the Conneltsville Imperial Quartet was applauded and greatly enjoyed by the crowd. Some very good speakers from Uniontown, Pittsburg and Mount Pleasant were present. The races were enjoyed by all who took part, and much amusement was afforded the people by the judging of the oldest person on the ground, the most beautiful lady, the most who can throw a needle soonest, the woman who could drive the most nails and the most beautiful lady and baby on the ground. The program of amusement was one of the best ever arranged here.

It is the Band!

ONLY the actual band performance can equal the power, the martial fire, the surging strength and sparkling brilliance of Columbia band recordings.

Marches, dances and overtures are rendered with the same clear, startling reality—a reality that marks a record at once as a Columbia Double-Disc Record. If you need any proof of the naturalness of Columbia band recordings, these records will convince you:

- A1045, 10 in.; 75c.—"Napoleon's Last Charge," Prince's Band, "Battle of the Nations," Prince's Band.
- A1914, 10 in.; 75c.—"Second Regiment Connecticut National Guard March," Prince's Band, "Washington Post March," Prince's Band.
- A1736, 10 in.; 85c.—"Bride Elect March," Columbia Band, "Young Guard March," Columbia Band.

Fine as the records here listed are, you will find their equals in every class of Columbia recordings. In orchestral, vocal or instrumental music, Columbia Records excel. Let your dealer prove it today.

Board of Health Reports
Stagnant Water Standing in Streets.

BURGESS TO HAVE WALKS LAID

Girl From Tarr Who Suffered a Fractured Skull When Thrown From a Horse is in a Serious Condition at the Memorial Hospital; News Notes.

Special to The Courier.

MOUNT PLEASANT, July 5.—Council met on Monday evening. Daniel Burgess asked that taxes be collected for a vacant lot belonging to the Lutheran Church, which it does not own, be returned. The refund was made. The Board of Health sent in a communication calling attention to a nuisance that exists on Hitchman, Oak, Sycamore, Quarry and Reservoir streets. In all but Oak and Sycamore streets the nuisance is stagnant water. The burgess was instructed to have sidewalks laid where they are needed. The burgess' check for $80 was received and the matter of having a light in the borough and collecting no money for it was placed in the hands of the police committee for investigation. An ordinance was adopted for the paving of Main street from the Baltimore & Ohio depot to Moorewood street.

The L. E. Smith Glass Company will begin work today on a building on the site where the old wreck factory was formerly located, for the purpose of making safe lights. Walk lights are glass bricks used in laying sidewalks.

The local order of Moose at their last meeting decided to carry over all members who went with Company K, Tenth Regiment, to the border. Thirty-two of the men who went are all members of the Moose.

Mary Pilecock, aged 17 years, of Tarr, who was thrown from a horse yesterday afternoon and received a fracture at the base of the skull was brought to the Memorial Hospital, where she was in a serious condition last evening.

The Bremen held a parade yesterday afternoon in which the South Greensburg and the South Conneltsville firemen, the Municipal Band, the Moose with their band, their military company and their members, and the Red Men participated. This was followed by a lawn race on the park and a boxing match in the armory in the evening by Glenn Miller and "Kid" Jackson.

Mrs. Richard Doncaster, son Paul and daughter Artie and Mrs. S. C. Stevenson motored to Gettysburg yesterday.

Mrs. Meade Mulvihill and Miss Harriet Gemmell of Pittsburg are guests of Mr. and Mrs. John Gemmell.

Mr. and Mrs. Ralph Barnhart of Ohio, are the guests of Mr. and Mrs. J. McD. Bryce.

"The Chalmers-Orford Order! Dr. Hingworth, I must direct you to bring your remarks to a conclusion and to move your audience."

"Dr. Hingworth—Your grace, I have much to say, but I bow to your ruling. I move, then, that while Professor Summerlee is thanked for his interesting address, the whole matter be referred as a matter of fact and be referred back to a later and possibly more reliable committee of investigation."

CHAPTER XXIII.
Chalmers' Great Surprise.

It is difficult to describe the confusion caused by this amendment. A large section of the audience expressed its indignation at such a slur upon the traveler by such a vote of dissent and vote of dissent. "Turn him out!" On the other hand, the indignant and it cannot be denied that they were fairly numerous, cheered for the amendment, with cries of "Order!" "Order!" and "Fair play!" A scuffle broke out in the back benches, and blows were freely exchanged among the medical students who presided that part of the hall. It was only the moderate influence of the presence of large numbers of ladies which prevented an absolute riot. Suddenly, however, there was a pause, a hush and then complete silence. Professor Challenger was on his feet.

"It will be within the recollection of many present," said Professor Challenger, "that similar foolish and unmanly scenes marked the last meeting at which I had been able to address them. On that occasion Professor Summerlee was the chief offender, and though he is now dismissed and expelled, the matter could not be entirely forgotten. I have heard tonight similar but even more offensive, and more serious, from the person who has just sat down, and though it is a conscious effort of self-assertion to come down to that person's mental level, I will endeavor to do so in order to allay any reasonable doubt which could possibly exist in the minds of any one" (laughter and interruption). "I need not retrace this audience that, though Professor Summerlee, as the head of the committee of investigation, has been put up to speak tonight, still it is I who am the real prize mover in this business, and thus it is really to me that any successful result must be ascribed. I have safely considered these three gentlemen to the spot mentioned and I have, as you have heard, convinced them of the necessity of my previous account. We have heard that we should find upon our return that no one was so close as to dispute our joint conclusions. Warned, however, by my previous experience, I have not come without such proofs as may convince a reasonable man. As explained by Professor Summerlee, our camera had been tampered with by the apes when they reached our camp, and most of our negatives, which were taken in the presence of the apes, were lost. I have mentioned this to you, and I cannot forbear from saying that some of the animals which now meet my eyes bring back most vividly to my recollection my experiences with these interesting creatures" (laughter).

In spite of the destruction of so many negatives, there still remain in our collection a certain number of corroborative photographs showing the conditions of life upon the plateau. Did they escape them of having forced these photographs? (A voice, "Yes," and considerable interruption which ended in several men being put out of the hall). "The negatives were given to the keeper of a camera. But what other evidence had they? Under the conditions of their escape it was naturally impossible to bring a large amount of baggage, but they had secured Professor Summerlee's collection of butterflies and beetles containing many new species. Was this not evidence? (Several voices, "No.") "Who said so?"

"Dr. Hingworth (rising): 'Our point is that such a collection might have been made in other parts than a prehistoric plateau.'"

"Professor Challenger—No doubt, sir, we have to bow to your scientific authority, although I must admit that the game is unimpaired. These, then, both the photographs and the enormous collection, I come to the verdict and accurate information which we bring with us upon points which have never before been elucidated. For example, upon the domestic habits of the so dramatic that it can never have been paralleled in the history of scientific gatherings. Professor Challenger raised his hand in the air as a signal, and at once our colleague, Mr. E. D. Malone, was observed to rise and to make his way to the back of the platform. An instant later he reappeared in company of a gigantic negro, the two of them bearing between them a large square packing case. All around him hushed in the audience and every one was absorbed in the spectacle before them. Professor Challenger drew off the top of the case, which formed a sliding lid. Preparing down into the box, he snatched his fingers several times and was heard from the press seat to say, "Come, then, pretty pretty in a smiling voice. An instant later, with a scolding, rattling sound, a most horrible and loathsome creature appeared from below and perched itself upon the side of the case.

"Even the unexpected fall of the Duke of Duriana into the orchestra, which occurred at this moment, could not distract the attention of the vast audience. The face of the creature was like the wildest gargoyle that the imagination of a mad medieval builder could have conceived. It was hideous, horrible, with two small red eyes as bright as plates of burning coal. Its long, narrow mouth, which was held half open, was full of a double row of sharp teeth. Its shoulders were humped, and round them was draped what appeared to be a faded, yellowish shawl. It was the devil of our childhood in person. There was a turmoil in the audience—some one screamed, two ladies in the front row fell senseless from their chairs, and there was a general movement upon the platform to follow the chairman into the orchestra. For a moment there was danger of a general panic. Professor Challenger drew up his hands to still the commotion, but the movement alarmed the creature beside him. Its strange shawl suddenly unfurled, spread and fluttered as a pale of leathery wings. Its owner grabbed at its legs, but too late to hold it. It had sprung from the press and was circling slowly round the Queen's hall with a dry, leathery dripping of its ten foot wings, while a purple and insidious odor pervaded the room. The cries of the people in the galleries, who were alarmed at the new approach of these glowing eyes and that murderous beak, excited the creature to a frenzy. Faster and faster it flew, beating against walls and chandeliers in a blind frenzy of alarm. 'The window! For heaven's sake shut that window!' roared the professor from the platform, dashing and waving his hands in an agony of apprehension. Alas, his warning was too asserts that at 9 o'clock morning, Starr Point being at the time ten miles upon their starboard quarter, they were passed by something between a flying goat and a monstrous bat, which was heading at a prodigious pace south and west.

"No," said she, "I am Gladys Potts."

CHAPTER XXIV.
I Hurry to Claim Gladys.

AND Gladys—oh, my Gladys—Gladys of the mystic lake, now to be renamed the Central, for never shall she have immortality through me. Did I not always see some hard fiber in her nature? Let me tell it in a few words. No letter or telegram had come to me at Southampton, and I reached the little villa at St. Leonards about 10 o'clock that night in a fever of alarm. Was she dead or alive? Where were my nightly dreams of the open arena, the smiling face, the words of praise for her man who had risked his life to honor or whim? I rushed down the garden path, hammered at the door, heard the voice of Gladys within, pushed past the staring maid and strode into the sitting room.

"Gladys," I cried, "Gladys!"

"She looked up with amazement in her face. She was altered in some subtle way. The expression of her eyes, the hard upward stare, the set of the lips, was new to me. She drew back her hands.

"What do you mean?" she said.

"Gladys," I cried, "what is the matter? You are my Gladys, are you not—little Gladys Hingworth?"

"No," said she; "I am Gladys Potts. Let me introduce you to my husband."

How absurd life is! I found myself mechanically bowing and shaking hands with a little ginger-haired man who was coiled up in the deep armchair which had once been sacred to my own use. We bobbed and grinned in front of each other.

"Fatherless as they were. We are getting our house ready," said Gladys.

"Oh, yes!" said I.

"You didn't get my letter at Paris?"

"No! I got no letter."

"I've told William all about you," said she. "He has no secrets. I am so sorry about it. But it couldn't have been so very deep, could it? If you could go off to the other end of the world and leave me here alone? You're not really, are you?"

"No, no, not at all! I think I'll go." I was through the door when a fantastic impulse came upon me, and I went back to my successful rival.

"Will you answer a question?" I asked.

"Well, within reason," said he.

"How did you do it? Have you searched for hidden treasure, or discovered a pole, or done time on a pirate, or down the channel, or what? Where is the glamour of romance? How did you get it?"

"He stared at me with a hopeless expression upon his ruminous, good natured, scruffy little face.

"Don't you think all this is a little too personal?" he said.

"Well, just one question," I cried. "What are you? What is your profession?"

"I am a solicitor's clerk," said he—"second man at Johnson & Merivale's, 41 Chancery Lane."

"Good night," said I and vanished, like all disappointed and broken-hearted heroes, into the darkness, with grief and rage and laughter all shimmering within me like a boiling pot.

One more little scene and I have done. Last night we all supped at Lord John Roxton's rooms, and, sitting together afterward, we smoked in good comradeship and talked our adventures over. It was strange under these altered surroundings to see the old, well-known faces and figures. There was Challenger, with his smile of condescension, his drooping eyelids, his intolerant eyes, his aggressive beard, his huge chest, swelling and puffing as he laid down the law to Summerlee. And Summerlee, too—there he was with his short hair between his thin mustache and his gray goat's beard, his worn face protruded in eager debate as he queried all Challenger's propositions. Finally, there was our host, with his rugged, eagle face and his child, blue, glacier eyes, with always a shimmer of devilment and of humor down in the depths of them. Such is the last picture of them that I have carried away.

It was after supper in his own sanctum—the room of the pink radiance and the innumerable trophies—that Lord John Roxton had something to say to us. From a cupboard he had brought an old cigar box, and this he laid before him on the table.

"There's one thing," said he, "that maybe I should have spoken about before this, but I wanted to know a little more clearly where I was. No use to raise hopes and let them down again. But it's facts, not hopes, with us now. You may remember the day we found the prehistoric rookery in the swamp—what? Well, something in the line of the land took my notice. Perhaps it has escaped you, so I will tell you. It was a volcanic vent full of blue clay."

The professors nodded.

"Well, now, in the whole world I've only had to do with one place that was a volcanic vent of blue clay. That was the great De Beers diamond mine of Kimberley—what? So you see I got diamonds into my head. I tipped up a contraction to hold off those stinking hoaxes, and I spent a happy day there with a spud. This is what I got."

He opened his cigar box, and, tilting it over, he poured about twenty or thirty rough stones.

"Perhaps you think I should have told you then. Well, so I should, only I know there are a lot of traps for the unwary and that stones may be of any size and of any value where color and consistency are close off. Therefore I brought them back, and on the first day at home I took one round to Spink's and asked him to have it roughly cut and valued."

He took a pill box from his pocket and spilled out of it a beautiful glittering diamond, one of the finest stones that I have ever seen.

"There's the result," said he. "He prices the lot at a minimum of £200,000. Of course it is fair shares between us. I won't hear of anything else. Well, Challenger, what will you do with your dirty thousand?"

"If you really persist in your generous view," said the professor, "I should found a private museum, which has long been one of my dreams."

"And you, Summerlee?"

"I would retire from teaching and so find time for my final classification of the snail fossils."

"I'll use my own," said Lord John Roxton, "in fitting a well formed expedition and having another look at the dear old plateau. As to you, young fellow, you, of course, will spend yours in getting married."

"Not just yet," said I, with a rueful smile. "I think if you will have me, that I would rather go with you." Lord Roxton said nothing, but a brown hand was stretched out to me across the table.

THE END.
